You may insert a .jpeg image of your brand into the Holding Brand field or use the drawing tool to sketch your brand. If these features are not available to you, you may send an image of your brand via email to info@ctlr.org.

CTLR does not require a fire brand for animals to be registered. Positive ID is the responsibility of the applicant, and the seller at time of transfer. This may include: hot iron holding brand and private herd number, freeze brand, ear tags with holding brand imprint and individual number, and photo record of the calf at the side of its dam matching color markings of the adult in question. Replacing lost ear tags is the responsibility of the owner before registration can be transferred to a buyer. Any registered animal that loses its identification tag and cannot be positively identified by photo record, must be submitted for an initial application inspection and DNA test.
